Giving an eye on AstraZeneca vaccine

Countries are now vaccinating their population in order to fight against the pandemic. Rich countries have already vaccinated a good percentage of people in their countries. Worries are in developing countries more especially African countries.

Recently, Malawi announced that they have purchased one of the vaccines from India (AstraZeneca) staged to start vaccinating Malawians in March. Mr President said the vaccine is 50% to 65% efficiency. Which implies that the chances are there that you can still get the virus even if you are vaccinated. This worries us.

On the other hand, South Africa purchased the same time of vaccine in which some were vaccinated but still got the virus. The vaccine does not work well. As such South African government has put on hold the exercise to examine its efficiency.

We argue government of Malawi to consider this seriously and purchase a better type of vaccine even if it is expensive. Going for cheaper vaccine will have a great impact on Malawian lives.

THE BRIEF HISTORY OF VALENTINE'S DAY

Lizzie Robinson

Writer | THE FACT SIDE

Lizzie Robinson from The Fact Side, has been a freelance writer since 2011. She enjoys writing about current issues and business. Today, Lizzie writes about the brief history of the Valentines day, how it started and why people cerebrate it on 14th February Valentine's Day is celebrated in many countries around the world on February 14th, but how exactly did this loved-up holiday come about?

If, like many other people, the only thing you know is that it's associated somehow with a mysterious Saint Valentine, there's plenty more you must know. Check out the lovely history of the most romantic day of the year!

Who is Saint Valentine?

Saint Valentine was a priest who conducted marriage ceremonies (and other services) in third-century Rome. The emperor at the time was Claudius II, who had the bright idea that men would make better soldiers if they were all single. As a result of his new theory, he banned marriage for young men, prompting Valentine to strongly disagree with him. Rather than go along with the new law, the good-natured priest carried on with the marriage ceremonies, meaning that many young people across the country could still get married.

Why do we celebrate Valentine's Day?

It is not known for certain why we celebrate Valentine's Day in February, although there are some interesting suggestions. The most popular is that this was the month in which Saint Valentine was martyred, although some theorists believe that it was first celebrated in February to overshadow a pagan festival. [The Lupercalia celebrations involved priests, a sacred cave and sacrifices in the forms of goats and dogs]. This was supposed to make the women of the city more fertile the year after, but since the Christians did not agree with this practice, it is very possible that they decided to celebrate Valentine's Day in this month too.

When did Valentine's Day become official?

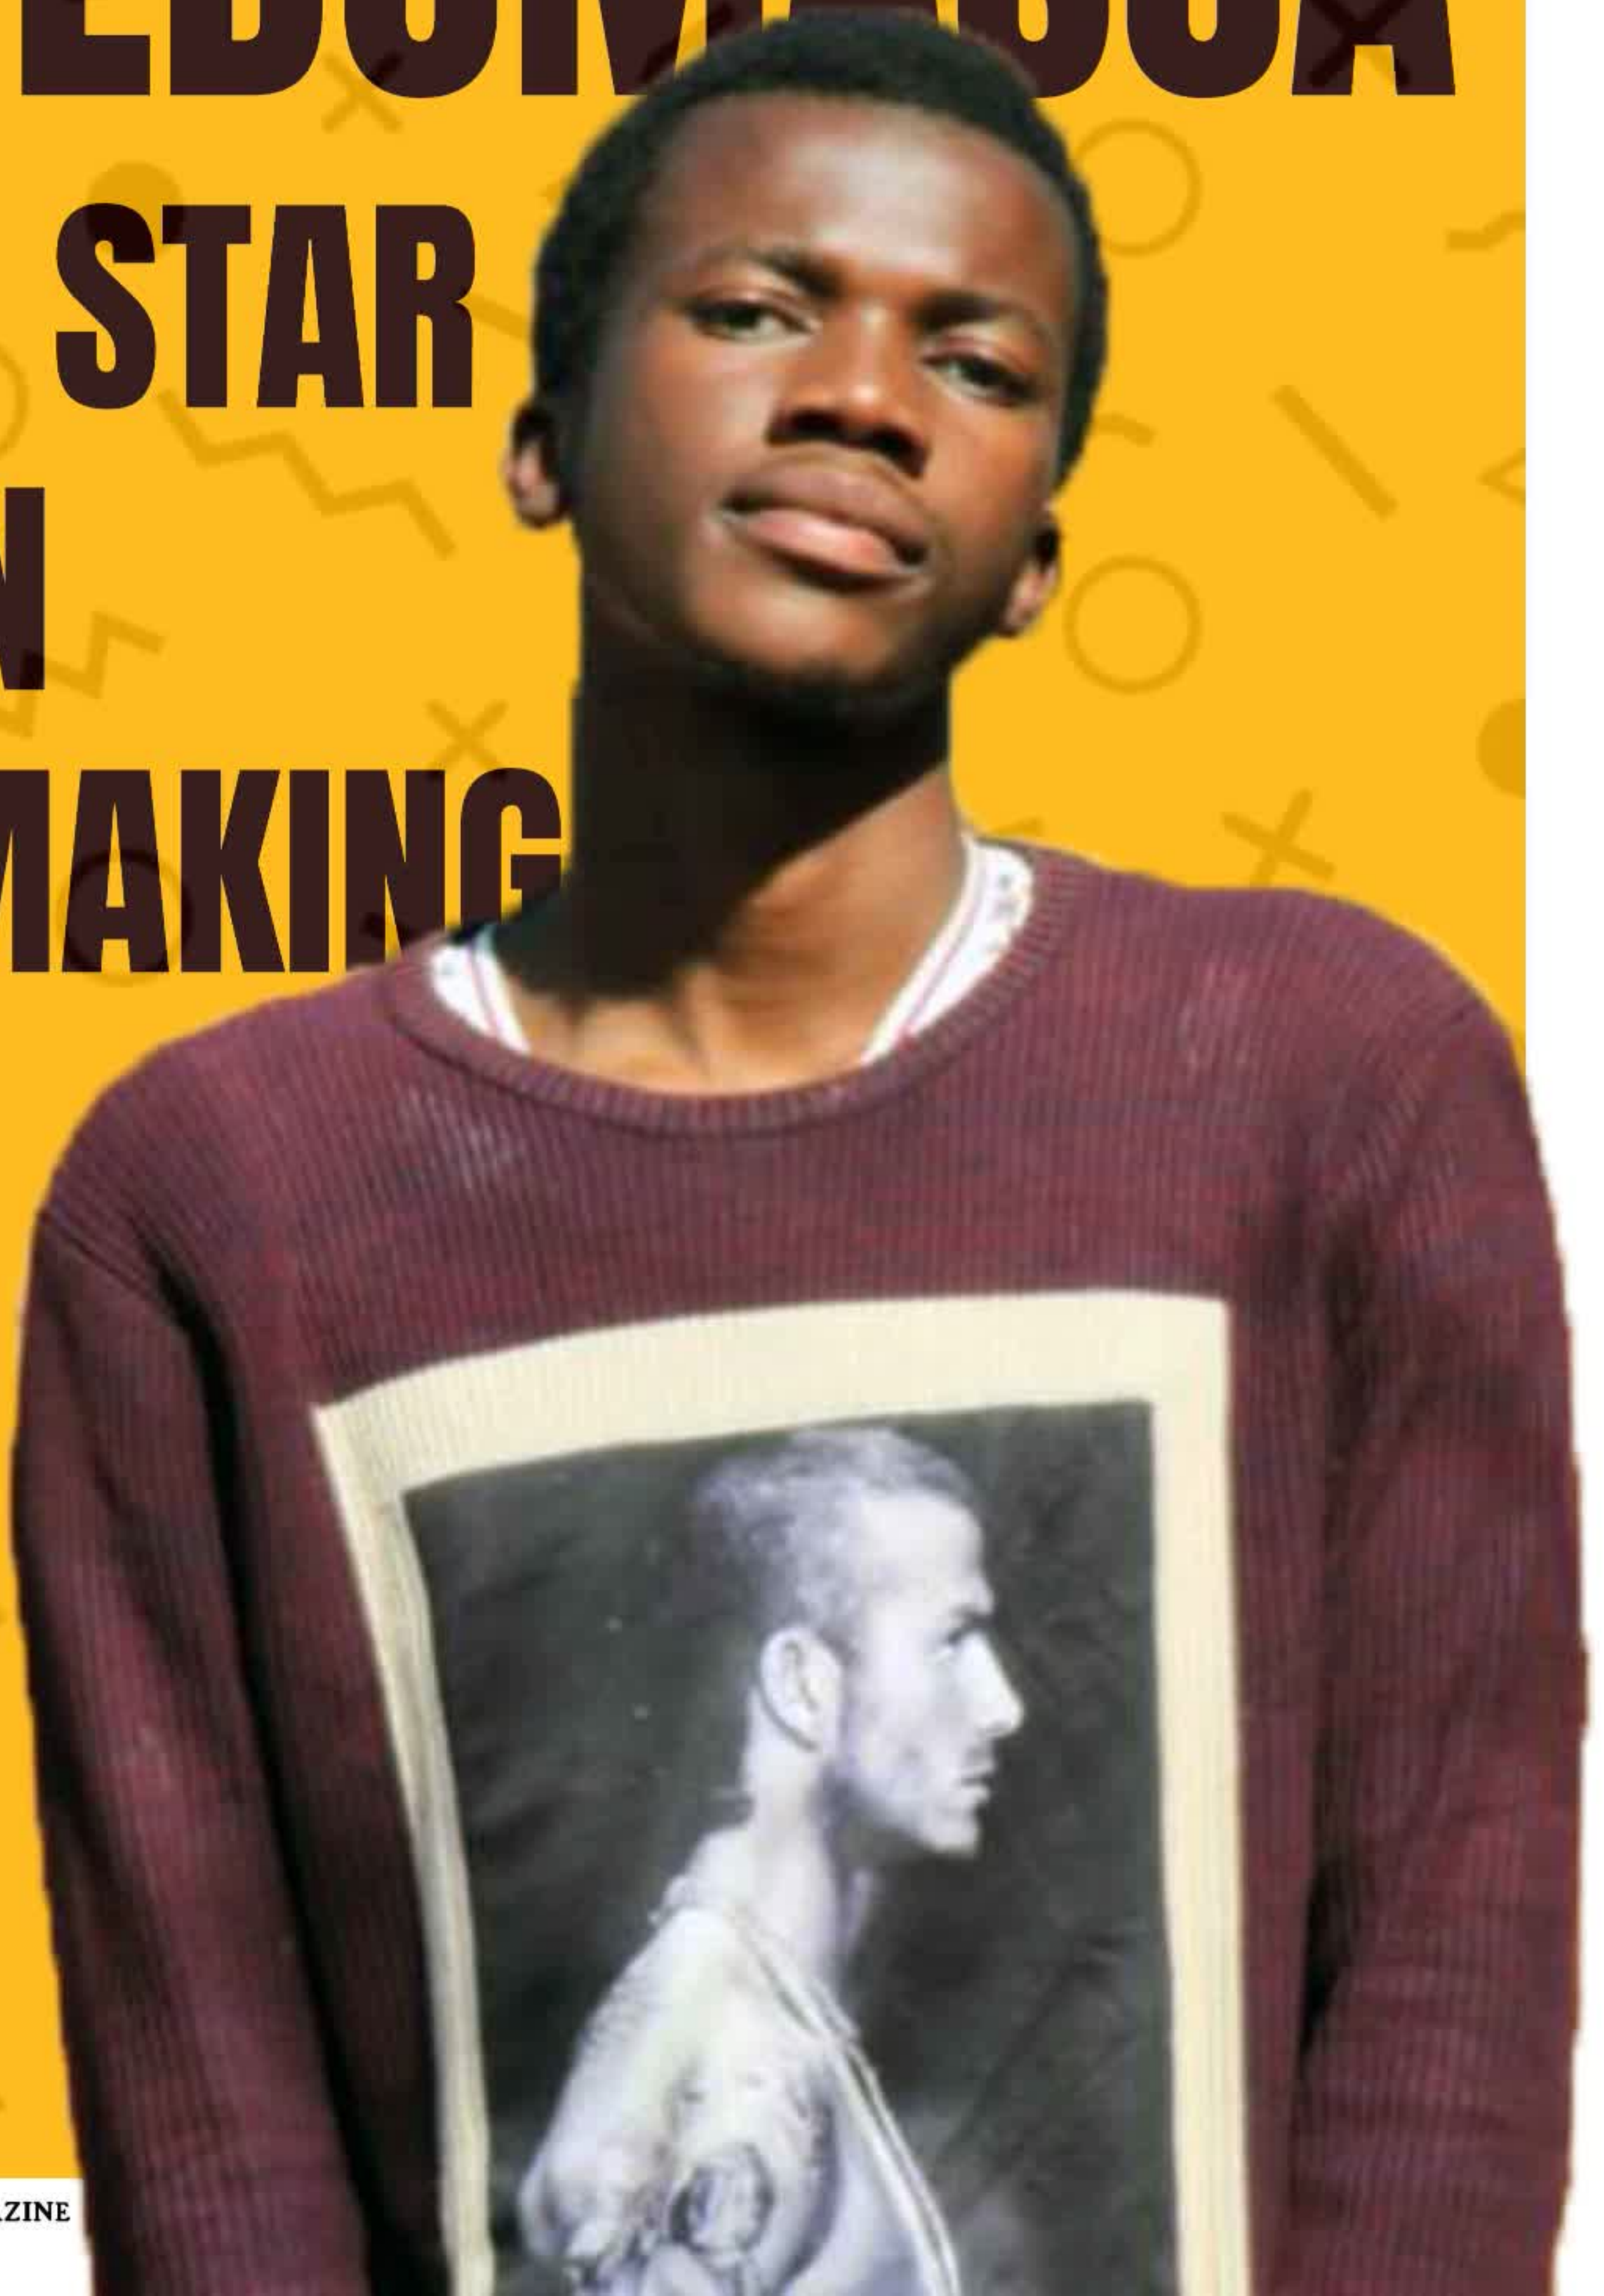

Two centuries after Valentine's death, Pope Gelasius became the head of the Catholic Church, and decreed that February 14th should be Valentine's Day. By now, the uprising of Christianity had well and truly gotten rid of the Lupercalia festivals, so everybody could concentrate on the day of love during this month. However, it wasn't really associated with love until later on. The people of the Middle Ages believed that February 14th saw the start of the mating season for birds, and when this theory was added to the legends of Saint Valentine, it started to make sense that this day should be one on which to celebrate lovers.

Wishing you a happy Valentine's day in advance

HOW TO...

LOVE

YOUR

SELF

written by Desire, edited by N Jay

Love is the hardest thing to give, even when it's to oneself. We are in the millennial world, whereby telling people that we love them gives us validation and purpose. Many of us say, 'I just want to be loved'. With this phrase, many people have gotten themselves in problems that they would have avoided. Raw relationships, depression even suicide.

People have the need to be loved, to feel loved but they can not see this as a problem and not a need. There has to be room for one to love themselves. People are not looking for people to love, they are looking for people to love them, because they as a person could not love themselves.

This is a disease, unless you fully love yourself and are fully satisfied with who you are can you fully love others. The reason why I say love others is because others loving you is not up to you, that's not your part and its none of your business. Your business is to have so much love for yourself that you would want to share.

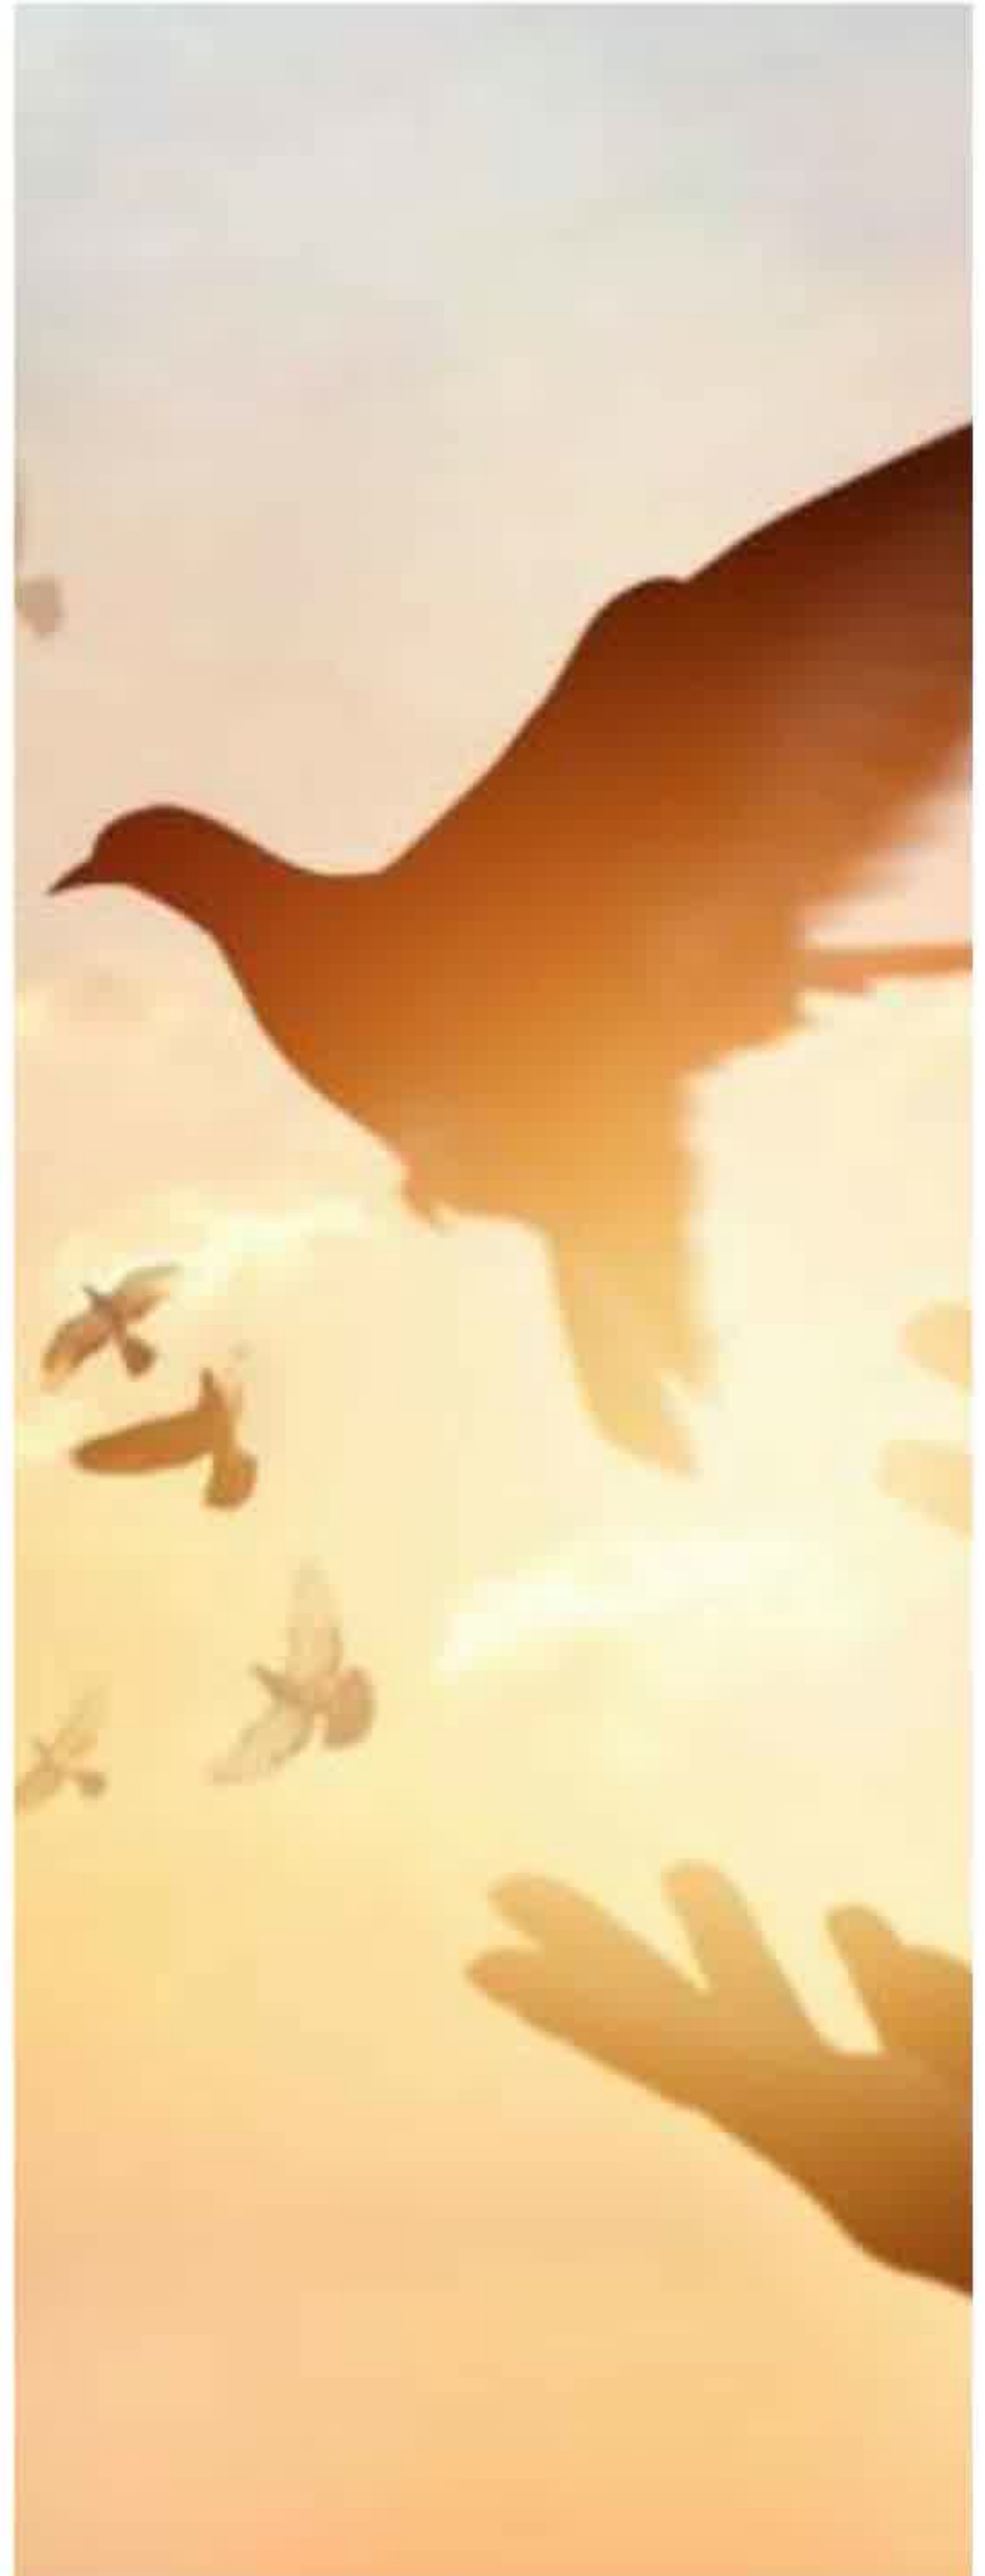

In this month of love, be the most important person in your life, love you, cherish you and be unapologetic about it. Its never selfishness to take care of you first before anyone else, because you cannot give what you do not have. So, this article would just like to enlighten a few ways to love yourself in this month of love.

Spoil yourself

How many of us have ever just taken themselves out, to spoil themselves, eat, feel beautiful in their skin? Most of us usually love having people to spoil so that they appreciate us, and their appreciation gives us validation. But here is the dirty truth, spoiling others only last that long, and the validation we seek, disappears as soon as the ability to spoil others disappears. We expect so much from people, and honestly speaking, I wouldn't if I were you. Take yourself out a couple of times, spend your money on you first, before anyone else (by your money, I mean your money, tithe, first seeds, offering, is not your money). When you see the value of money on you, you will not expect so much from people, rather you will spoil them while fully satisfied with yourself. When we seek people's validation by spoiling them first before spoiling ourselves, we become poor and hate ourselves

Appreciate your self often

Appreciation is very important. The reason why many people gave up on themselves and their dreams is because they wanted others to appreciate them before they could appreciate themselves. When you start a small business and people don't appreciate it, sit down, look around and appreciate all the efforts that you are putting in that business. Learn to look in the mirror and see a strong person. Confess good things about yourself, tell yourself you smell good, tell yourself your smile is beautiful, tell yourself you will become a great woman, a great man. No one will tell you that you are beautiful that will make you feel beautiful, only you can make yourself beautiful to the point that when someone tells you otherwise you remain unmoved and unshaken because you know you are beautiful. You need to believe your words first before you trust any other person. Confidence makes everyone shine, and you only get that from within. If you wait for people to appreciate you, before you appreciate yourself, you will die waiting.

Forgive yourself

I have lived the best part of my life in condemnation, because I couldn't forgive myself and I am not the only one. Many men resulted to excessive alcohol consumption because they can't forgive themselves for something they did as a child. Forgiveness has always been the only road and door to a better life. Regret comes at a place where forgiveness failed to pass by. When you do not forgive all the things that you have done as a child, teenager as well as yesterday, you may fail to love yourself. Haven't you considered how we hate people that we haven't forgiven? Can you talk to them? that's the same kind of feeling we have towards ourselves when we fail to forgive ourselves. Sit back and engulf on all the things that have hurt you, or that hurt others because of you, baby accept it, it happened and you can't change the past, but when you forgive yourself, you get high chances of making a better future.

Learn to move on

Someone really dear to my heart fails to move on, he thinks that moving on hurts. And I do understand why he would think that, but that is the same reason he doesn't truly love himself no matter how much he needs to. He doesn't see that his stagnation is because he has failed to move on from the things that are holding him back. I know everyone says its easy to advice someone to move on, but its hard to do. Yes! That is very correct, but nothing easy is worth doing. It's the hardest things that are really important. Move on, from those toxic relationships, from that unforgiven baggage, from those friends, its time to move on. You will never truly love yourself if you do not sacrifice others. Selena Gomez sang and I quote 'I had to hate you to love me', this means there are some people you have to lose in order to love yourself. You have to know that your life is very important, your health is very crucial. Let go of the things that are making you feel worthless so that you can practice self-love.

There are so many ways to help you love yourself. But this year's valentines, before buying chocolates, cars, houses, teddy bears, socks and whatever people give on valentines. Make sure that you have given yourself a valentine's gift first. Let Love start from within. Remember you cannot give what you don't have.

Who is she?

Who is she, I see her
From a distance wondering
While she shines like
The bright light from the sun

Who is she, her beauty reside
In a jar made of gold
Because she is and will Forever be flourishing in beauty

Who is she, she is a rose, a diamond
A pearl, the most stunning of all God's creation, worth more than you Could ever imagine, : worth more Than the numbers on the scale,
Worth more than the shoes she wears

I would tell her she's worth all this
I would say she's beautiful
I would tell her she's a daughter of A King, the same king who hand-picked Every star in the mid-night sky
Then shaped her in this beautiful image

@RodgerZ(priest)

Angels would cry
if they hear my heart beat That's every second of tears whenever my thoughts split
It's the quietest noise
that's deeply raging
To the place of brokenness
I am a citizen abiding

Get me when I say love is a shed full of shade
I found me a comforting hand but I still grieve
It's easy to smile
but happiness is unfulfilled dream
It is the water of life that flows downstream

Seasons change they say
Maybe my time is coming I pray Hoping it won't come when my hair is gray
Save my love life now or I will go away.

Listen

Everyone loves good news
Yet the world only gives news
It takes an ear to hear
An eye for a tear
Hearts gripped with fear
Just some reasons we are here

A thought is never spoken clearly
Most issues we need to listen
Yet if we speak
Eyes are there to judge
Life is just one man's stage
We all have our own page

To the voice of love
We tried
To the voice of hate
We lied
To the things we never heard
Listen to your heart

Never be quick to judge, listen
When you close your ears, listen
If you close your mouth, listen
Even if you close your heart, listen
Keep your focus and listen

@EdwinHara

Valentine is coming

It's strange how time flies
For we have days to go ears are ready to tingle
Will it knock at your door?
Will you smell the roses?
Or sing Adele's HELLO
As it is coming, where is yours?

ONE NUMBER

To express the feeling concealed, in my weary heart.

I was in search for the right words,

But I found myself shackled

Inside the rhythm of your smooth voice,

That you usher me with, every day.

As time is passing my brain is still computing, for the Right number to scale you on, and the number One seems to be the right fit for you.

For in my heart you're the only one

And speaking of the alphabet, I have a few combinations;

With or without make up,

You still look gorgeous.

With one or many collections of smiles,

Yours is still enough.

Your beauty and character fits in all spectrums

So if you existed centuries ago,

the statement "beauty is in the eyes of the beholder"

Would have been false.

So, please trust me with your heart,

I promise, no element of trust in it will be broken .

For out of all numbers, you're my ONE number.

How Foden, Cancelo and Guardiola got Man City back to their brilliant best

The Catalan coach is now surely destined for his third title in four seasons following a dominant performance against Liverpool on Sunday. Manchester City's performance at Anfield had everything. It was the archetypal Pep Guardiola display, that intoxicating mix of football's fundamentals — resilience; control; rugged adaption — with those Pep-patented tactical ingenuities. When they are in this kind of form, City glide about the pitch, swapping positions and cutting through the lines in a swirling pattern that achieves what all great art seems to: distilling an extraordinarily complex process into effortless, simple beauty.

Werner admits to top-four fears under Lampard before Tuchel arrival at Chelsea

The German frontman, who continues to attract plenty of attention for his form this season, feels the Blues are “back in shape” under the new manager. Timo Werner admits fears of not finishing in the Premier League top four had started to form at Chelsea before Frank Lampard was relieved of his managerial duties and Thomas Tuchel was appointed. The Blues initially looked to be moving nicely through the gears in 2020-21, with a 17-game unbeaten run at one stage on the back of sizeable summer investment. They were, however, to find themselves stuck in reverse before club legend Lampard departed and Tuchel was brought in to oversee a Champions League push that has delivered 10 points from his first four fixtures at the helm.

'We are not robots' - El Morro Garcia's tragic passing shows need to care for players' minds and bodies

The former Uruguay youth international died on Saturday in Mendoza, where he had been a leading forward for Godoy Cruz in the Argentine top-flight.

Content warning: This article discusses suicide

On the morning of February 6, Godoy Cruz's Uruguayan forward Santiago Garcia was found dead in his apartment in Mendoza, having died by suicide. News of the 30-year-old's passing provoked an outbreak of mourning in both Garcia's native Uruguay and across Argentina, where his exploits had made him a cult hero.
