Grin's
Fire
Fridays

It's rare to find artists taking time to entertain their fans and yet some are making it possible. Tay grin who happens to be one of the best artists in Malawi took his time to make a show and he named it Grin's Freaky Friday.

This show was sort of a dancing competition and the best dancer was to walk away with two hundred and fifty thousand. His fellow artists joined to support him, one of them being 2baba who contributed an amount of two hundred thousand and Walter junior nyamilandu also contributed a hundred thousand. The show was actually a success despite getting several criticisms from people. As though this wasn't enough, Tay grin also helped people who were diagnosed with Covid-19 with the money that he was able to get from the show and from what his fellow musicians contributed which amounted to two hundred and fifty thousand. It doesn't end there, the show is still in progress and it is actually being followed by a lot of people.

CONTINUED..

Years ago, my mother left her mother's house to look for medicine with a thought of helping her mother get back to her full health. This was two weeks after her father, my grandfather died. But before he died, he acknowledged her that she needs to take care of her little brother Parko. They buried him and left his possession in my mother's hands.

My mother left her village heading to the neighboring village where she met my father's brother who fell in love with her and planned of getting married. After 2 years my father's brother died and my father married my mom according to our customs. My mother got pregnant for my father and gave birth to me. Three years later my mother got news from her brother that they are expecting a baby.

The father died before the baby was born so my uncle married her because of our Custom.

That baby was Jasmine Lucrezia, the girl I fell in love with.

Time for a blame game, I froze like a statue with nothing to say on the dinner table. All that bubbled in my mind was that I blamed my parents for not allowing us visit our relatives. But that had nothing to do with this encounter. It took us twelve minutes before I broke the silence.

"I guess this is it Jasmine" I sighed. She left the table in a hurry packing her things trying to leave. "There's nothing we can do" thank you for the time we had, cousin." She left sobbing. The fact that everything she said was true hurt me more than I ever imagined. I tried calling her, she never picked up my calls.

This was the time I needed to man up, or maybe I didn't. It was sad to look at my parents in the eye. I stayed in my room for days without a bite of my Mother's food. "Do not torture yourself like that, life is too short for such worries. I've once dated someone that didn't workout but look at me now, I'm with your father and here you are. Life isn't a course where you get a distinction every time. Take your time son and get yourself together." My mother comforted me.

I felt her inner person sobbing because she knew whatever she said wouldn't get into my head and I continued staying in my room alone.

One sunny morning, I woke up to jog for a bit. But since there wasn't anyone to jog with this time around, I felt a bit lonely. On my way from my room to the main door, I overheard what my parents were discussing.

COLLUSION COURSE

"I think he is losing it now, I mean did you see how he nearly bathed hot water without cooling it? I think I have to have a man to man talk with him." My dad suggested. "I think that's a good idea, try to talk to him this evening." My mom agreed to the idea.

After hearing all this, my mind was crowded with a lot of thoughts, but that didn't really bother me, so I left the house for my usual jog sessions. While I was jogging, I saw someone in front of me, so beautiful that I even gave her some space so she can pass me and I look at her on both angles. She was a curly haired girl with a bit shy dimples, tall but not taller than me. She looked 24 and I really liked her. I couldn't resist but to talk to her.

"Hey, can I talk to you for a second" I asked her with a faint voice. "Yeah sure, anything" she replied back with a smile that revealed her dimples. As I was about to go deep into a conversation with her, Jasmine called.

"Hey, Denver I know this is not the time to talk about this but I feel like it's crucial and we all have to be sensitive to this." Jasmine addressed me with a weak voice. I thought of what she said but I couldn't crack the code either so I asked her to clarify, she hang up and responded with a single text, "Denver I am Pregnant."
