Tips for Being More Social on Your Own Terms

Written by Cindy Lamothe

Being more social isn't about pleasing everyone around you. Seriously. There's nothing wrong with chilling at home and binge-watching your favorite show after a long week.

Putting yourself out there can look different for everyone. Maybe for you, it's about hanging with some of your closest pals or chatting it up with the pizza delivery guy.

Here's a look at 10 tips to help you better connect with others. If some of these tips aren't the right fit, feel free to ditch them altogether and try something else. What's important is that you find the joy in connecting.

Make sure you're doing it for the right reasons. First thing's first, there's no right way to put yourself out there. It's OK if you're not into hitting the club every other night or accepting all those Facebook event invites. More than anything, you're under no obligation to fulfill other people's expectations, and this includes how you spend your time. Pay attention to your gut reaction here. While feeling close to others has its benefits, it's important to go about it on our own terms and in a way that feels psychologically nurturing to you.

You have to be a good listener. We all like to feel seen and heard. One of the best and undervalued ways of connecting with others is by thoughtfully listening to what they have to say. You can practice listening by being curious and seeking to understand where the other person is coming from.

Avoid interrupting them mid-story or talking over them when they answer a question. Instead, offer your undivided attention and genuine interest. Try to ask follow-up questions where they feel natural to show that you're listening carefully to what they're saying. When listening, keep these questions in mind: What's important to this person? What are they excited to share? What do they value?

Give compliments freely. When in doubt, say something kind. The right words at the right time can make someone's day significantly better and also open the door to a conversation. Studies show that by doing so, we also increase our own life satisfaction. Telling a co-worker, you enjoyed their presentation or letting someone know how much you like their shirt is a great way to connect. But make sure you’re being sincere to avoid appearing disingenuous.

Here are a few steps for paying someone a compliment: Pay attention to what you genuinely like about a person so that you’ll really mean what you say. Don’t be obvious. Notice the small things that make someone unique so that your words stand out. Avoid platitudes or clichés. Don’t say the same thing to everyone or compliment their physical appearance. Instead, focus on personality qualities or quirks.

Also get involved. If you’re ready to take a bigger step toward putting yourself out there, consider finding a hobby that is social, such as volunteering at a nonprofit. This is also a great way of giving back and being of service. Participating in activities you enjoy can help alleviate feelings of inadequacy when meeting new people, especially if you’ve just moved to a new community.

Plus, you already know of at least one thing you’ll have in common with others there, whether that be a love of gardening, a soft spot for animals, or a passion for social justice.

Chat with strangers. There’s nothing like getting to know those around you to make you feel like you’re part of a community. For one, it gives you a sense of belonging. It also gives you an opportunity to turn acquaintances into closer friends. Start up a spontaneous conversation with your barista the next time you’re ordering your latte, or ask your neighbor how her day is going.

While seemingly casual, one 2014 study found that interacting with a wide network of people on a daily basis contributes to your well-being.

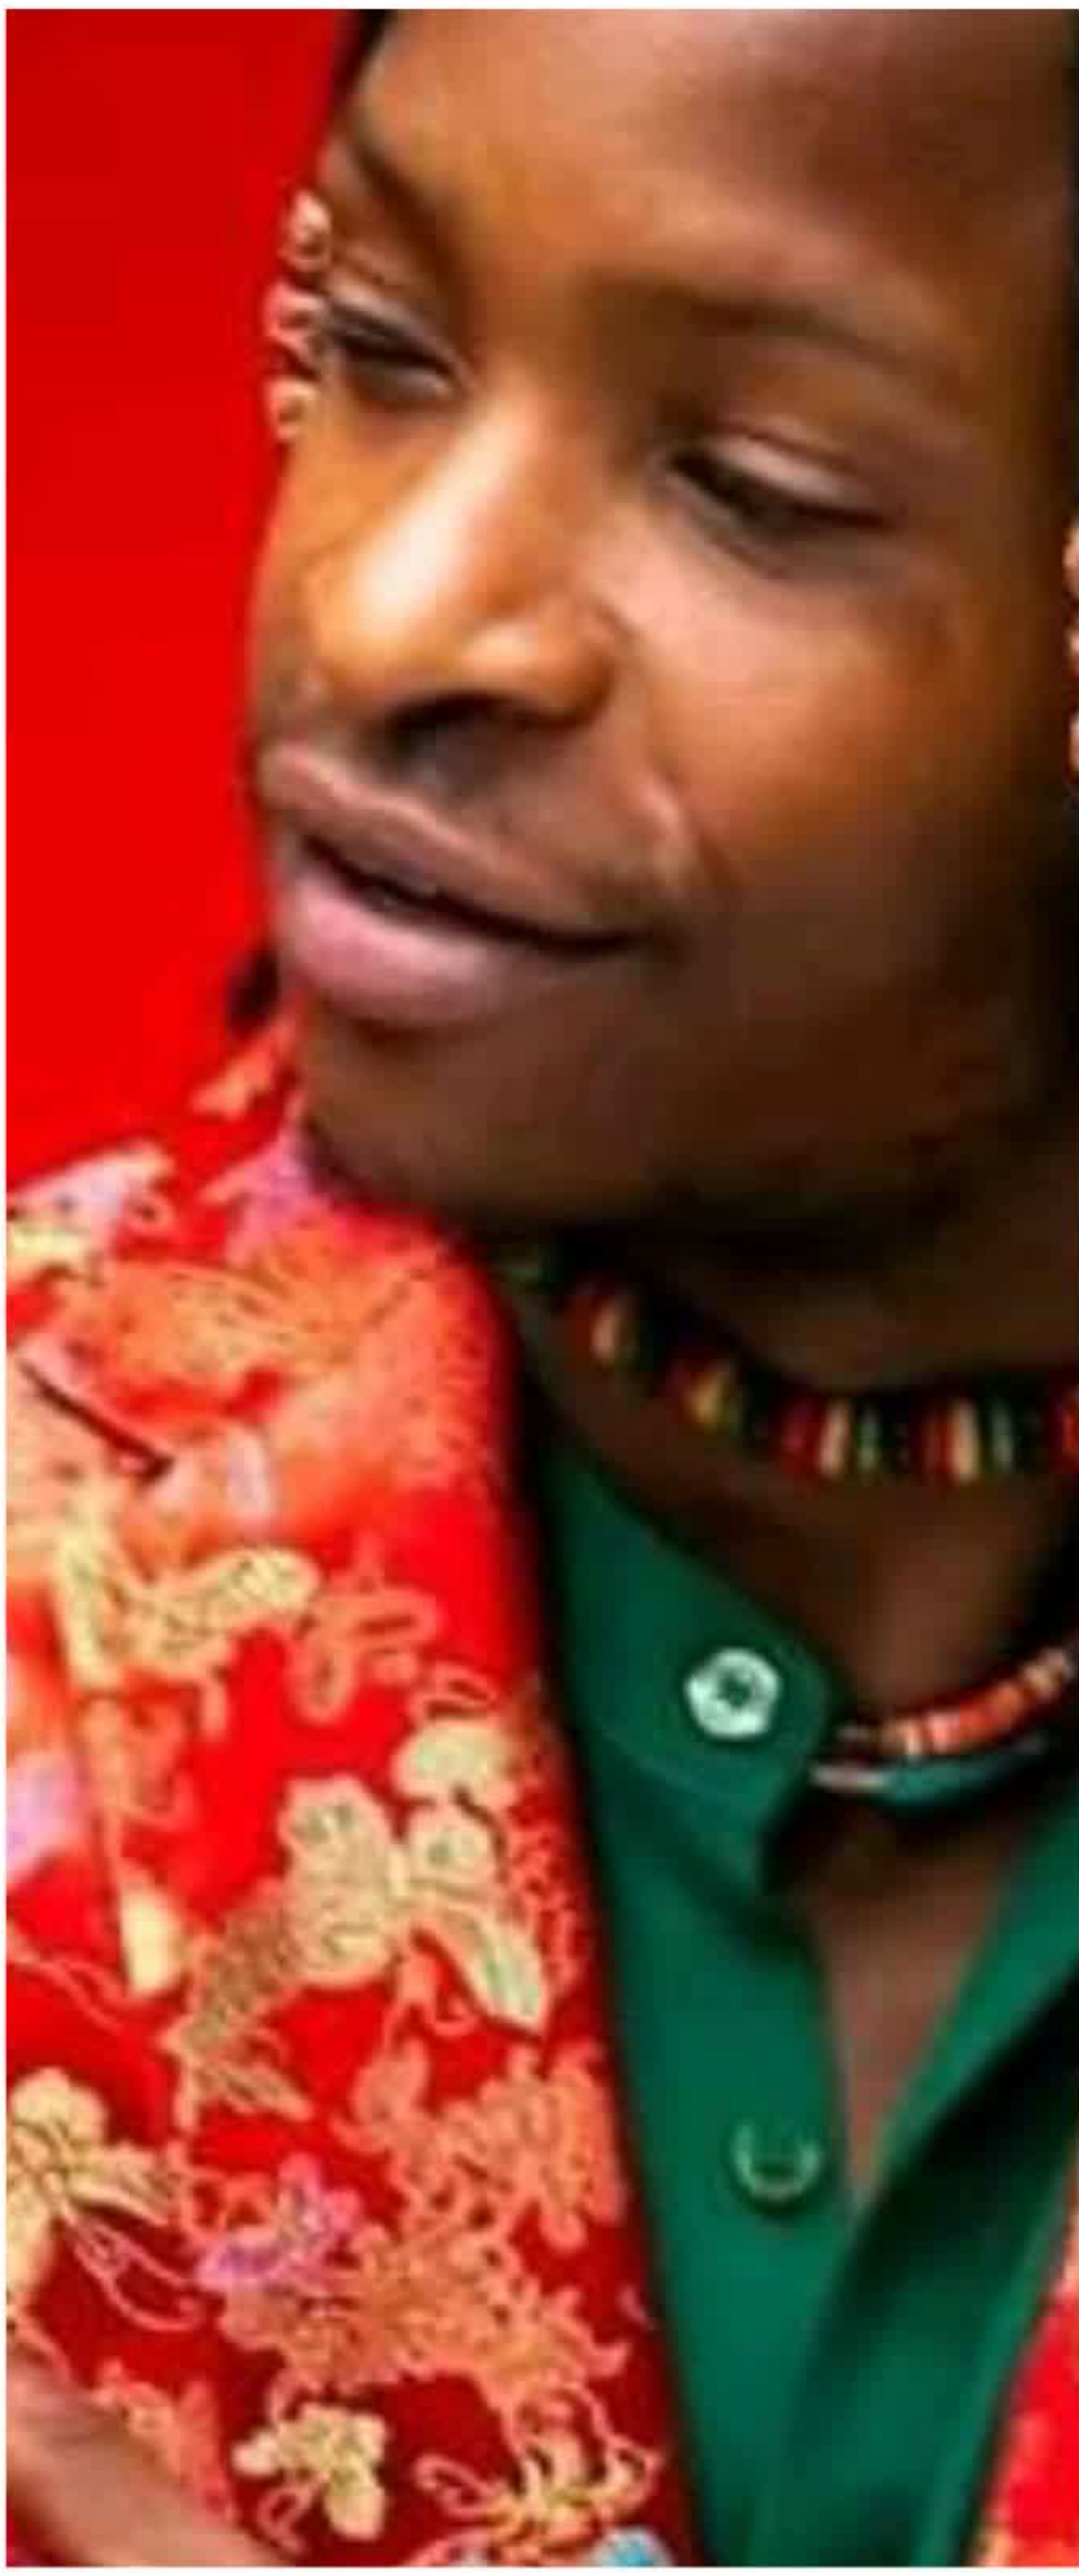

At last, recognize when you might need help. Human connection is an important part of your overall well-being, but it isn’t always easy. Keep in mind that developing your social skills is a gradual process that won’t happen overnight. Don’t judge yourself if you aren’t making as much progress as you’d like.

It’s normal to experience some nervousness when you put yourself out there, but if you feel inhibited by your shyness or that it’s preventing you from socializing, it may be time to talk to someone about potential underlying mental health concerns, such as social anxiety, agoraphobia, or generalized anxiety disorder.

Gwamba, Fredokiss postpone Fill Up shows

Story by Views Mag Correspondent

Two local rap heavyweights have suspended their plans to hold musical concerts at the country's biggest stadiums.

Dubbed Fill Up shows, Fredokiss was scheduled to fill Kamuzu Stadium in Blantyre on March 28 while Gwamba was eyeing Bingu National Stadium in Lilongwe on a date to be announced.

However, the two shows have been put on hold due to Covid-19, both Gwamba and Fredokiss have confirmed.

Gwamba: We will wait for the Covid-19 to die down "With this whole corona thing, I want everything to settle down first then I proceed with the shows. I don't want a scenario where I have set a date and start investing in the show then end up postponing," he said.

Gwamba claimed that for the Mzuzu Stadium show, he spent about K9 million on billboards and deposits for almost everything, but ended up postponing the event.

"So, we will wait for the Covid-19 to die down, then will start with shows," he said.

On plans to do more Facebook live shows as he did recently with a Sorry for Covid gig, the award-winning artist asked fans too watch out.

"I'm planning something big very soon," Gwamba said without giving more details.

Fredokiss, on the other hand, asked his fans to be hopeful beyond the Covid challenges.

"See us making history. You see, God doing the impossible through us. See victory in despair. See yourself being part of a generation that is making history," said the Malamulo a mu Ghetto hitmaker. He said his team has put all promotional activities on hold until they are sure of the dates.

"The stadium manager also communicated on the same. Our Fill Up Kamuzu Stadium show is still on but with Covid-19 issues, we are not doing promos because if things don't change soon, we can change the dates.

"As soon as gatherings are allowed, we will definitely fill up Kamuzu Stadium," he said. The two musical concerts were billed to be among the big events in the first half of 2021.

Broken But Beautiful

Written By Views Mag correspondent

If you ask me what does it mean to be a woman, in my feminist point of view I will tell you that a woman is power, strength, care and love all over. With that I will not shut up, but I will also tell you how they are devalued and they need to be to be seen as powerful human beings, I will tell you how much I feel that the patriarchy is not favorable to women. So, for that reason, I will tell you that the women I want to see are independent powerful ladies, who are beautifully broken, who are unapologetic with who they are, who will express themselves and not let anyone look down on them. Who are free!!!!!!

Women have been dictated on what to wear, how to pose, how to look, what to say even who to be with in some instances. Which has led them in depression, unhappy lives and a life full of what ifs. This collection, FREEDOM STREETWEAR has been inspired by all women who feel stuck and caged by the societal norms. I remember my grand mother telling me 'cover yourself, men can't control themselves, '. 'Men can't control themselves?' but how is that my fault? So, I covered up, granny said, I do. This inspired the whole look, women need to look powerful, strong, beautiful and also all on their own terms.

This collection gives freedom to women to look chic, sexy, powerful, strong and look so beautiful that even if their surroundings are not as beautiful but their presence will stand out. In these depressing times, women need to get back their power, they need to stand up and take over, not to be defined by society norms that impinge their own desires. This article is going to every woman, young lady, girl who is out there trapped in their own body, not free, feeling insufficient.

I want you to know that you are broken and its beautiful. Its time for you to take back the power in your hands, don't play the victim no more. You don't need someone to fix you, or validate you. You have to be yourself, dress the way you feel like. Cheap, expensive, it doesn't matter.

I want you to know you are superwoman and you are strong, you are phenomenal and enough, you don't need anyone to tell you who to be (in Kelly Clarkson's voice)

With these few remarks, get your own power custom made attire from Sirelle creations, be the beauty in this dirty surrounding.

Keeping the Entrepreneurial Spirit Alive

By Matt Tarkenton

As any business ages and grows, it will change. You don't always do things the same way you did as a startup. The quest for innovation and new approaches to problems often gradually give way to a focus on incremental improvements and doing what you've always done, just a little bit better. This problem is part of what is widely known as The Innovator's Dilemma, after the title of the book by Harvard professor Clayton Christensen.

That innovative spirit, that focus on finding novel solutions to big problems, is a big part of any business's beginnings. So why do many companies lose it? One of the problems is that as they grow bigger, their people are focused more on the existing business, on their specific tasks, on smaller everyday problems. The daring to take on big challenges and try new things falls by the wayside—why risk the existing business on a moonshot?

But to have a sustainable business, one that will weather new challengers, new technologies, and new times, you have to retain that entrepreneurial spirit. You have to reinvent yourself for each new day. The business that does that has the best chance of continuing to solve problems for people, of offering real value to customers both today and in the future. It's not easy, but it can be done.

Here are three things to keep in mind that will help you preserve an entrepreneurial spirit in any company:

Don't fear failure.

Innovation requires risk—and risk means there is a chance of failure. Not every idea works, and especially on the first attempt. But when people try to avoid the negative consequences of failure, they also lose out on the chance of success. You can't have one without the other. Of course, that's not permission to throw caution to the wind and chase after every silver bullet with reckless abandon. You have to be smart, and on the lookout for your best opportunities. Vet your ideas with others, and work on refining them. But don't be afraid to take the plunge just because there's risk involved. Take smart risks that have the best chance of success.

Encourage flexibility. Look for people who are willing and able to handle a wide range of responsibilities. When you're a new business, you need people who are flexible and can handle multiple roles. Those same people will be valuable in keeping an entrepreneurial spirit alive as you grow, especially when many people you add are more specialists in particular areas. More adaptable workers help you take on new challenges and see things in different ways, helping you to get to get “unstuck” when you need it.

Build through small teams. It's easy to keep adding more and more people into a conversation, until the group is so large that nothing can get done. Everyone has their own interests, their own vision, and the only way to keep the group together is on small, inconsequential thing. You'll find that the best, most innovative thinking comes from small groups of people. Small groups working from the bottom up will be more creative, while a big group only stays focused when order comes from above—defeating the whole purpose of setting up a group to work on innovation!

NOW

By Meon Masache_

As long as I remember that moment,
we first met
I see no way forward but just now
If i say i will make it up to you,
silence me

Because we all know how lies comfort broken hearts
As long as my word echoes
in a whisper in your mind

Remind yourself how painful it is to never get your very wish

If desires fuel false hopes inside you
Never ever be a princess without a castle
As long as it hurts to accept that there is no future us
Know that our time is now.
Just now.

RIDDLE

It gets lonely
When love is not loving you
But feels so strong when in love

The metaphor of life
We choose whom to love
Yet that loved one is never in love with us

So i bet my everything in love
I lose but to hate
Indeed, the heart fools the mind

Brains full of emotions
Hearts filled with thoughts
The many things eyes are smiling

Unstoppable: Man City's winning machine finds extra gear to power past Wolves

Pep Guardiola's side scored three times in the final 10 minutes to secure a 21st successive win in all competitions with a 4-1 defeat of Wolves. Manchester City simply refuse to accept anything other than victory right now. At the Etihad on Tuesday night, Wolves came as close as anyone over the past four months to putting the brakes on their hosts' incredible winning run, yet somehow still ended up losing by a three-goal margin

Ronaldo raises the bar yet again by sealing 12th consecutive 20-goal season

The Juventus star's goalscoring run is unmatched across Europe's top-five leagues. Cristiano Ronaldo continued to raise the bar on Tuesday as he fired Juventus to a 3-0 win over Spezia. The Portuguese goalscorer was joined on the scoresheet by Alvaro Morata and Federico Chiesa as Juve ran rampant as they looked to keep pace in the Serie A title race. And, with his 83rd-minute goal, Ronaldo made history once again as one of the game's greatest-ever goalscorers.

When is the Champions League quarter-final draw? How to watch, time & teams for 2020-21 knockouts

All the details about the draw as Giorgio Marchetti and Co. at UEFA headquarters will soon be warming up the balls. The 2020-21 edition of the Champions League has entered the business end of the competition and there is very little room for error in the knockout rounds. Sixteen teams emerged from the group stage and they will soon be whittled down as the quest to be crowned European kings goes on.

Here, VIEWS MAGAZINE brings you what you need to know about the quarter-final draw, especially when it is.

The Champions League quarter-final draw will take place on Friday March 19, 2021 and it will begin at 11am GMT (6am ET). As is customary, the draw will be held at the House of European Football at UEFA's headquarters in Nyon, Switzerland.

Chelsea's Haaland pursuit casts shadow over Abraham & Giroud's battle for No.9 shirt

The Blues duo may both have a big decision to make this summer, if the club goes all out to land the most coveted young forward in football right now. Chelsea's interest in signing Borussia Dortmund superstar Erling Haaland may be exciting for supporters but it only creates further uncertainty in the minds of the club's current strikers. Olivier Giroud, for example, was the Blues matchwinner in Tuesday's Champions League clash with Atletico Madrid in Bucharest. His acrobatic overhead kick secured a deserved 1-0 victory that puts Thomas Tuchel's side in an excellent position ahead of a second leg at Stamford Bridge on March 17. However, the 34-year-old has now entered the final five months of his contract but is unwilling to discuss a renewal until the end of the season. And it's easy to understand why.

Kajoke suspended from Flames Camp

Flames Technical panel has suspended striker Hassan Kajoke for violating the team's code of conduct and COVID -19 camping protocols when he left camp without consent.

“The reason for the suspension is that, on the evening of Sunday, 28th February, 2021, the player left the training camp at Mpira Village in Chiwembe for home without the consent of the team manager and or head coach.

Fisd gives VAM k2.5 million

Foundation for Irrigation and Sustainable Development (Fisd) has provided K2.5 million to Volleyball Association of Malawi (VAM) for the Mzuzu International Volleyball Tournament. In an interview, Jack Kujaliwa Junior of Fisd said they were asked to assist the association with prize money for the Mzuzu International Tournament.

“It's our wish as Malawian company and it is our responsibility to return what people gives us. We help many people like orphans and others as part of corporate social responsibility. Lastly, we want to thank all Malawians for supporting their own Malawian company,” said Kujaliwa.

Killy Msuku, one of the International tournament organizers, said they are delighted with the sponsorship from Fisd and promised that the money will go toward prize presentations.
